Improving Outcomes For Learners – Our Stretch Aims	22

Foreword

As we hopefully begin to emerge from the challenges of the last two and a half years with Covid-19, I am pleased to be able to present the Education Service Improvement Plan for session 2022-23. I have been incredibly impressed with the determination of our school communities to improve outcomes for our learners throughout this challenging period and this plan represents the next steps in an ambitious programme of recovery and renewal, innovation and improvement.

The service is very clear about where improvements have been made and what still needs to be done. You can read more about our progress over the last year in our recently published Standards and Quality Report.

I am confident that everyone throughout the education service will be very focused on delivering the twin aims of excellence and equity in terms of educational outcomes and will take forward the high level priorities contained in this plan. I look forward to being able to report on the impact of this plan in a year from now.

Councillor Shaun Macaulay
Depute Leader of North Ayrshire Council and Portfolio Holder for Education

Introduction

In almost all aspects of learning there has been a consistent improving trend of achievement across the last decade. Throughout, our schools and early learning and childcare settings have had a clear focus on raising attainment and reducing the poverty-related attainment gap, in line with local and national priorities. Nevertheless, the arrival of the coronavirus pandemic in 2020 brought with it significant challenges for our families and communities. National lockdowns, interrupted learning and significant changes in personal circumstances have impacted on the outcomes achieved by our children and young people.

To mitigate this, we diverted significant resources. We invested in supporting our children and young people and maintaining a determination to make further progress in achievement for all learners. We are pleased to report that we are beginning to see the recovery take effect, with improvements in a range of areas last session.

As part of our ongoing process of self-evaluation, we have scrutinised how well we are doing as a service in supporting recovery and further improvement and we have used this evidence to shape the content of this Education Service Improvement Plan for 2022-23. You will read in the forthcoming pages our priorities for the year ahead, which are aligned to North Ayrshire's Council Plan and the National Improvement Framework for Education. This document summarises what we will do, what we aim to improve and how we will measure success.

This plan is ambitious yet achievable for our children and young people. We are confident that recovery from the pandemic will continue throughout 2022-23 and beyond. For the first time, we have included stretch aims for improvement over the next five years to show our sustained aspirations for and commitment to the children and young people we serve.

We have no poverty of expectation, opportunity or aspiration for our children, young people and their families. As a result, our overriding aim is to improve the educational outcomes for all learners, particularly those most disadvantaged learners.

All educational establishments have created their own improvement plans, aligned to the broad priorities and themes within this plan, and tailored to the individual contexts and needs of learners in each school community. These plans are available from individual establishments and are accessible electronically on their websites.

This plan builds on the excellent teamwork across our directorate. It reaffirms our commitment to continuous improvement and to delivering for the children and young people of North Ayrshire.

Improving as a Service

Our commitment to continuous improvement permeates the work of the service. Our establishments work very closely together with each other and our central team in a culture of positive support and challenge. Our overarching approach can be summarised as follows:

We strive to be a learning organisation.

We support the principles of subsidiarity and empowerment of our head teachers and school communities.

We evaluate the impact of the central education team in supporting consistency of improvement across our educational establishments.

We work closely in partnership with colleagues across our Regional Improvement Collaborative and nationally.

We are investing in the quality of our teachers, practitioners and support staff.

We are investing in our learning environments to ensure they maximise opportunities for engagement and achievement for all.

We are developing the leaders of tomorrow through our innovative leadership and facilitation programmes.

Our Learning Environments

A key priority of the North Ayrshire Council Plan is ensuring children and young people have the best start in life and that we have active and strong communities. This drives our place-based approach and informs how we provide safe, welcoming, nurturing, and inspiring environments. We believe our learning environments promote achievement, wellbeing and enhance life chances.

We want North Ayrshire's children and young people to understand, feel part of and contribute to their community as this supports them to be the best they can be. We help this to happen through a locality-based approach to service delivery.

This means providing the right services in the right areas to address the needs of the communities we serve. The learning estate is the Council's most extensive asset and is a key pillar in supporting communities.

Scottish Government's 10 learning estate principles are key drivers in how we manage North Ayrshire Council's Learning Estate. By delivering on these principles, we can be confident in providing a sufficient, safe estate that is flexible, functional and future-proof. We continue to learn from the COVID-19 pandemic and the change it has caused in how we use our learning estate.

A strategic approach is taken to the assessment of the learning estate, which ultimately leads to investment that improves our learning environments in areas of greatest need. We strive for excellence as we understand the difference this can have in helping our children and young people to thrive.

The tables on the next few pages outline the key elements of our ambitious plans for 2022-23 to improve educational outcomes for North Ayrshire's children and young people.
